Research Mission: Recovering constitutional thought from the Malay world and bringing it into global constitutional scholarship.

1. Academic Biography

Dr. Hos Arie Rhamadhan Sibarani is an Indonesian constitutional law scholar whose research explores constitutional theory, comparative constitutional law, indigenous constitutionalism, legal history, and governance in the nineteenth-century Malay world. His current research reconstructs the constitutional thought of Raja Ali Haji and develops Malay Ethical Constitutionalism as a conceptual framework contributing to Indonesian constitutional scholarship and global constitutional theory. His broader interests include constitutional accountability, corrective justice, environmental governance, and law and society.

7. Publications

To be completed with peer-reviewed journal articles, books, book chapters, conference papers, policy papers, and public scholarship.

8. Research Philosophy

Constitutional ideas do not belong exclusively to any single civilisation. They emerge wherever communities seek to organise authority, limit power, and pursue justice. My research is devoted to recovering overlooked constitutional traditions from the Malay world and bringing them into dialogue with global constitutional scholarship.
